- Language Test Results (if applicable): Proof of language proficiency meeting the required CLB levels.
- Fees Payment Receipt: Proof of payment for the application fees.
- Additional Documents: Any other documents specified in the application guide or as requested by IRCC.

Processing time

The processing time for PGWP applications can vary, with typical processing times ranging from 80 to 180 days, depending on the applicant's specific case and the volume of applications being processed. To track the status of your application, you can check online through the IRCC portal.

Processing fee

In terms of fees, the work permit application requires a fee of CAD $155, with an additional CAD $100 fee for those applying for the open work permit holder option. If biometrics are required, there is an additional fee of CAD $85. Applicants should make sure to pay these fees at the time of submission and keep receipts for verification.

How to apply

As for the application process, it starts with gathering all necessary documents and completing the application form IMM 5710. Once the form is filled out, applicants should create or log into their IRCC account, upload the required documents, and submit the application online. Biometrics may be required, and applicants should attend their biometrics appointment if necessary. Upon approval, a PGWP is granted, and applicants can start working in Canada immediately. It is important to follow the IRCC guidelines carefully to avoid delays in processing or complications with the application.
